
PROJECT GIRLSPIRE

UNIQUE GLOBAL FEMALE VOICES.
CREATING THE NARRATIVE.

SANG KROMAH

Sang is a digital media strategist and published Young Adult fiction author, who holds a Master's degree in Communication Arts from New York Institute of Technology. You may recognize her from magazines such as Essence, Jet, and many others as she modeled for years to supplement her income as a student. She has devoted her career to pursuing projects that empower women and girls; from a start at Seventeen Magazine to working on the Liberian portion of the "Half the Sky" documentary and creating the concept of a UN Women gender-based violence initiative to creating an initiative that will open Liberia's first female-run public library. She created Project GirlSpire as a project under Resources and Outreach for Liberia's Project READ, but she has transformed it into something bigger...an independent entity for and by girls and women globally to have their say.

Sang writes a column for Project GirlSpire, #The10Spot, which is a rundown list of products, people, services, entertainment, technology, etc. that are for girls and women, by them, or about them.

THE BLOG

The purpose of Project GirlSpire is to provide a global platform where girls and women are empowered to take risks, be the authors of their own stories, break barriers, travel, create, and pursue what sets their souls on fire. It's a nonjudgmental place where everyone has a say and interests are explored and discussed.

Project GirlSpire partners with brands and organizations for Workshops, Brand Ambassadorships, Product Reviews, Media Interviews/Features, Sponsored Posts, Event Coverage and more. If you would like to partner with us, please email skromah@projectgirlspire.com

GirlSpire

2,100+ Followers
(Project GirlSpire)

3,000+ Followers
(Project GirlSpire)

2,800+ Followers
(Project GirlSpire)

8,100+ Followers
(Sang)

5,100+ Followers
(Sang)